Queen Foils Election Hopes

I think I can, I thin I can

Before a bolt of lightening rends me in twain, let me explain instantly that the phrase above is not mine but is rather a Jim Coutts, chief political aide to the prime minister, and of Senator Keith Davey, the PM's chief election strategist. Only the Queen, it seems, stands between Coutts and Davey and their hope of a snap election this fall. Actually, describe Coutts and Davey as hoping for a fall election is a bit like remarking that without considering the air pollution. Had either of the pair their druthers, the election would have been held yesterday.

Tricky Timing

String together the latest Gallup Poll which puts the Liberals ahead by a whopping, and a constantly widening, margin of 47 per cent to 32 per cent, the five-in-six Liberal victories in the by elections, the national unity issue which Prime Minister Trudeau has appropriated for himself and lastly Conservative leader Joe Clark's "faltering campaign", to employ a phrase that recently outraged his wife Maureen McTeer, and it's obvious the Liberals would pulverize the opposition in an early

The problem is the Queen. She's due you'll recall, to visit Ottawa on October 15 to open a new session of parliament.

That timing is tricky. On the one hand, Her Majesty would be distinctly unamused to find on her arrival either that all her ministers were hustling about on the hustings, or that, since it takes time after an election to put the new House of Commons in order, no parliament existed for

The fact that intolerable misrepresen-

Queen to stay home would be rude.

The best-planned election plays of Coutts and Davey, could, just, be revised to accommodate the Queen. An election held early in September, say, would provide the Queen with ministers to greet her and with a parliament to open. Yet that date, really, is too early: Aside from the problems of reaching voters at their cottages and beaches, the election itself would have to be announced early in July, which leaves Trudeau with a bare three weeks in which to make up his mind after his June 16 return from the Com monwealth conference in London.

To win an election commitment from Trudeau during that brief, late-June early July "window", Liberal party hawks, of whom there now are flocks, have yet two more obstacles to overcome

The lesser difficulty is the lack of any reason for an early election. To invent an issue won't be easy, though with imagination it can be done. Potential exists in the Arctic gas pipeline, for instance, except that cabinet won't make up its own mind about the matter until late August. More promising is the proposed Charter of Minority Rights. If Liberal luck holds. Quebec Premier Rene Levesque will enounce the charter as unconstitutional in fact it would be — and hand Trudeau the excuse he needs to demand that the people decide. A more considerable difficulty is that Trudeau actually means what he has been saying in public-such as, at his press conference last week, "I am not planning for an election. I do not feel the need for an

Trudeau's.competitiveness, this source adds, makes the prime minister deter mined to score, "a complete victory this time—which means winning the west." Three times Trudeau has conquered the country; he never yet has conquered the west. ## Davis Pushes Unity Theme

It is generally conceded to be an issue which somehow favors Premier William Davis and the Conservatives, although one would never, heaven forbid, discuss it in

he hoped national unity would not become a partisan issue, whatever that may mean. and the other party leaders quickly agreed

'The issue in this area." Davis said. is not that of clear differentiation in policy as much as the question of leadership, confidence and stability. The choice, therefore, is which party and which leader our people wish to have to advance Ontario's and Canada's cause in the important days, months and years that lie immediately ahead.

Davis went on to say that a strong Ontario, "pursuing responsible economic and social goals," is essential to a strong Canada and that there should be no question in the rest of Canada, after the election, "that the premier of Ontario speaks with the clear mandate of its people, when acting on their behalf to-maintain national unity and prosperity.

Overworked Themes

Granted that the generality of this defies analysis, one can nevertheless sense in it the two major Conservative themes of the campaign: bashing the socialists (that's the NDP) for not pursuing "responsible economic and goals." and appealing (mostly to the third-party Liberals) for a Conservative ma-jority government and a "clear mandate" to speak for Ontario in the councils of the nauseam over the past month but never. Heaven forbid, in a partisan way. It is merely an inference by others, not an implication by him, if the impression is created that a NDP victory would be a threat to national unity, or that a Liberal government would somehow be weak about keeping Canada together. Thus. it is mere coincidence no doubt, and no partiasanship intended that former premier John Robarts, in appealing to his fellow citizens for a strong mandate for the Davis government, should write: "The lack of leadership in the Liberal party, the resurgence of the New Democratic Party

Why NDP leader Stephen Lewis and Liberal leader Stuart Lewis have allowed the Conservatives to spread this clap-trap unchallenged is hard to explain. It appears they naively believed Davis would not try to exploit national unity in the campaign.

DAVIS not partisan, heaven forbid and to answer at this stage would risk the appearance of partisanship, which heaven torbids. In short, they have been gulled.

We are, therefore, left with Davis' speeches as the only source of material for measuring the issue according to the premier's own yardsticks of "leadership. confidence and stability." It is, as noted, palpable stuff and mostly clap-trap, but part of one speech - in London on May 27 contains some substance which merits

This is that a federal-provincial secretariat on contederation be appointed. "the best minds and most

'The concept I have in mind." Davis said. "is based on the premise that we must find a way to broaden the scope and structure of the debate on national ur we are to be successful . . . We must bring others into the discussion, Canadians whose innate ability or distinguished service or vast experience in other areas of endeavour mark them clearly as people who have a significant contribution to make in both defining and resolving the Canadian dilemma.

The first thing to note about this, despite Davis' implication that he thought of it first, is that it is extremely derivative. Much the same idea has been advanced by all sorts of people in recent months. The most sophisticated and thought-out version I have seen was B.C. Liberal leader Gordon Gibson's paper to the national Liberal policy conference here last March.

Simply Dumb

The second thing is that Davis misses the whole point. His "best minds and most able people" would come from wherever but they would be appointed by govern-ments and "would, in effect, be working on behalf of all the governments of Canada." In short, they would be delegates, advising and reporting to governments. The essence of Gibson's approach, and that of other proponents, is that it be non-government as far as possi-ble, simply because governments have struck out on confederation and the crisis is too important to be left to the politi-

Tory Appeal

I would like to reply through your columns to a letter requesting support for the Progressive Conservative party under the signature of Michael Meighen.

Many events in life are disappointing to us as thinking, planning people. Probably amongst these is that people do not believe us when we attempt to influence their point of view.

The message from the Tory party - appealing to us nonentitles (the voter who is important only when there is to be an election), to let private industry which creates jobs and payrolls etc. to get Canada going again, by no means flatters the intellect of people. No one is hindering private industry from creating jobs in canada. The Liberal government is as successful as a Progressive Conservative government would be. Neither really has much control. Indeed it seems to me the opposite. An excellent example is the recent CRTC ap-

Save University

Due to the bad economic conditions in our province, this is an expecially bad time to remove our university from the Interior. With the unemployment picture as it is and probably will be for some time, students are having a difficult time to obtain jobs so that they may return or start in universities at the coast. It is not economically feasible for the average parents to send their children to coastal universities but these same parents could board their children in their own homes or perhaps in the home of a relative near an Interior university.

There are also many adults who will and have upgraded their educational skills if there is a university close by - thereby making them more useful to their employer - the community and last but not least to themselves.

These are the reasons I know we must save our university. - Susan Talbot,

Now Trudeau and his Quebec caucus have some time. Their base from which to shape strategy and tactics to match Levesque and the PQ is sound. The contest ahead is not the un-necessary one of winning Canada in a general election. It is to "take out" the affirmative side in the PQ referendum when it comes: to see the PQ supplanted as the governmen in Quebec by the provincial Liberals (probably led by Jean Chretien) sometime in 1980 or

The initiatives rest largely with Levesque at this time, and will, until he sets the date of the referendum

Trudeau began with the announcement that Don Thorson, a well-regarded deputyminister (justice) was moving into the federal-provincial relations sphere to work on constitutional propositions. The PM said that he had no immediate aims for major proposals before fall. His present constitutional ideas are really the ones which failed to gain unanimity from the.

Not Inflexible

The PM replied most carefully. He had not changed his basic views on federalism. For stability and equity the provinces must be stitutionally the same. That is he had not moved a bit towards the idea of "special status" or "particular status" for Quebec, popular back at the time he was writing his con-

Meddling

What outrageous travesty of morality could bring the United States government to meddle in the internal affairs of its closest ally? Simply this: The Canadian government, in the United States view, had sanctioned an unforgiveable environmental ripoff.

In the American news media. "baby" seals are being "cruel-ly" clubbed to death to make fur coats. Worse than that, harp seals are an "endangered species." Canadians should be ashamed, and Uncle Sam is just the fellow to tell them.

Fortunately, the Canadian government is not so quick to make decisions on the basis of emotional publicity cam-paigns. When the anti-sealnting protest began 12 years ago, the powers in Ottawa started an intensive program of scientific research. They asked scientists all the controversial questions

Is clubbing a seal "cruel"? Biologists, veterinarians and representatives of prestigious humane societies went to the ice year after year. The vast majority of published scientific findings agree that clubbing brings a quick painless death with no psychological distress. Some observers went so far as say that the seal-killing than any slaughterhouse

Are the harp seals an endangered species? In the early 1970s, scientists agreed that these seals were being were instituted. Now the seal population is increasing. One scientist said two years ago that the harp seals were an endangered speies — a conclusion that has been widely quoted. But, interviewed recently on Canadian radio, that scientist now would not commit himself. He isn't sure, he said. The majority of scientists who have studied the harp-seal population are sure: The seals are not endangered.

As a result of the scientific research, more is known abou! harp seals than about any other Canadian marine resource. The seal hunt is the best regulated, most scientifically managed fishery in the North The goal of the scientists, the Canadian government and the fishermen is ecological harvested at the optimum sustainable yield.

Fisheries scientists don't believe in marine "sacred a ton and a half per seal per year. There are twice as many seals as Newfoundlanders, and the seals eat four times as many fish as Newfoundland fishermen caught last year Ecological balance means seals must be hunted.

No scientific argument is going to convince armchair ecologists that it's okay to kill 'baby' animals to make fur coats. Yet, consider that even as farmers do not kill baby sheep, but rather slaughter lambs, so fishermen do not kill baby seals but rather hunt

Even if it is ecologically sound, clubbing "baby" seals isn't nice. Nature should be a grand international park where the deer and the antelope play. It's time for men to stop taking. We must become planetary stewards. The United States will lead the way, naturally. Cultural imperialism is never out of fashion in North

Earlier this year, saboteurs picketed the church of a well-known hunting vicar in Essex. Several of them attended the service and at one point treated the startled the startled the startled the service to a crivited rendering of the congregation to a spirited rendering of the hymn All Things Bright and Beautiful, the final line of the verse being altered to "Our vicar kills them all."

* * * Both the League and the Association, however, were unanimous in their con-demnation of a ghoulish piece of direct ac-tion carried out at the beginning of this year when the grave of John Peel was dug up and his remains (such as they were) thrown into a nearby cesspit. John Peel was the most famous huntsman of all, immortalized in a song which described, among other things, how he used to get people out of bed at five o'clock in the In condemning his opponents as leftwingers and yobs. Rowley was ironically echoing the sentiments of many of the huntsmen who see the saboteurs as being envious leftists motivated by class hatred Hunting is not the exclusive preserve of the aristocracy. In a recent court case involving assault on a hunt saboteur the men accused included a retired garage owner.

There is a class division, however, which was well illustrated by the dilemma facing the long-established and respec-table Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. For years the RSPCA agonized over blood sports, having many members who opposed them while at the same time enjoying the patronage of keen hunters. Last year it finally came off the fence and opposed hunting. Princess Anne and her husband Mark Phillips still hunt regularly and the Queeen is still the patron of the RSPCA. The hunting season ended in March and doesn't begin again until November so there is plenty of time for the dust to settle before the autumn campaign. By that time it should be clear just who is in control of the League since Rowley is currently fighting a fierce rear-guard action. But there may also be a political hurdle by then. Opposition to blood sports has never featured prominently on the Conservative Party's political platform and it is their star which is now in the ascendant. With the possibility of a Tory victory at the polls, the anti-hunting campaigners may well decide that regarding each other as unspeakable as well as the hunters is a luxury that they can ill.attord

Oil 'supply discussions are being conducted in a vacuum, he said, because companies have no idea what the energy policy of governments will be.

"Until we know what they have decided in Ottawa and Washington and Victoria and Olympia there is nothing we can do."

Hall was commenting on a proposal by former Esquimalt-Saanich Liberal MP David Anderson that Canada invest $150 million in the estimated cost of $450 million for a major oil port at Port Angelos Angeles.

Anderson said a pipeline Alberta and occasionally from from Port Angeles to Vancouver could assure B.C. of oil when Alberta supplies begin to run down within a begin to run

Trans Mountain has already made a similar proposal but the work would be carried out at Cherry Point, just below the B.C. border, rather than at Port Angeles. The company already has a pipeline into the Cherry Point area.

Cherry Point area.

An derson opposed the Cherry Point site because of the hazard of an oil spill in inland waters. Anderson said. B.C. will need a major oil port within a decade and it would be better to have a joint project with Washington at Port Angeles rather than to at Port Angeles rather than to look for a B.C. site.

derson proposal is feasible from a technical point of view and the cost of constructing the line from Port Angeles to existing Trans Mountain lines would be $199 million.

There would be no company objection to the Port Angeles plan, although outside financial 'assistance from Ottawa or other companies would be required to spread the burden of the $190 million cost, which could not be recaptured through projected marketing oil could be transported from Washington State to B.C. for local refineries and surplus oil could be moved through exist-ing pipelines to Edmonton and then down to the U.S. Some modifications would have to be made to B.C. refineries if they are to use the Alaska oil. CHICAGO (AP) — Old crop soybeans, down 57 cents a bushel in the last three ses-325.00 sions, attracted enough buyers to advance 17 cents on the Board of Trade today.

New crop months came under mild selling pressure. Soybean meal and oil in the old crop deliveries displayed some firmness early, while the deferred options were generally steady to a shade

Corn futures were up to about one cent a bushel higher but wheat prices were leed broilers were up '4 cent a pound on a demand that was associated with some early firmness in feed grain and meal prices.

The turnabout in old crop

The turnabout in old crop soybeans reflected some constructive figures on the amount of soybeans inspected for last week. The figures were slightly under the previous' week's totals, but the trade viewed them as an improvement since Erazil reportedly has stepped up foreign sales from the new crop. The deferred soybeans eased about five cents early on

Ex Park Inconvenience: Getting There a Problem

The weekend in review . . . and with Seattle Slew awaiting only the running of the Belmont this week to become thoroughbred racing's new winner of the triple crown, the acion was back at Exhibition Park . tion was back at Exhibition Park. ... and white sheeting isn't quite the horse that many people thought he might be after two successive victories ... Willie and the rest of the field were far back to My Boy K.K. in the Lietuenant-Governor's Handicap in the mud; and the more surprising fact was forther head; they willie that Captain's Party was even further back than Willie ... But racing's like that and don't ever count them out in future events . . . it comes under the heading of if you haven't got a chance then don't use the horse unnecessarily, and neither Willie's Revenge nor the Captain had a shot after My Boy

Willie's Revenge nor the Captain had a shot after My Boy K.K., a $4,000 claim early last year, opened up daylight on the back side . . and that was quite a claim.

And if you're wondering why attendance is down this year at Ex Park, that's easy. Blame it on the ferries. They get blamed for everything else, and this one is legitimate too. First, the fares went up, but secondly, and probably more important, the ferries people knocked out the 10 a.m. sailing from Swartz Bay and that's inconvenient and a very good reason why Islanders aren't making the trip to Ex Park on Saturdays as they used to; and there are no chartered buses any more (or there weren't on Saturday) . . . Gee, and It was any more (or there weren't on Saturday) . . . Gee, and it was only a couple of years ago that six or eight buses would be making the Saturday junket . . . But times change and it probably augurs well for the Sandown meeting this fall . . . Everybody will have money before the meeting starts and won't just be trying to get back even:

Revealed in the latest issue of Track Talk are the following figures which show that nobody really can compete with ing figures which show that nobody really can compete with government when it comes to advertising . . to wit . . In January, Loto Canada sent out a mailing to 4.850,000 people and it cost only $120,000 to do it . . Loto Canada's total advertising budget for draw No. 1 was more than $2 million . . . for draw No. 2 it was more than $2.3 million and for draw No. 3 it will be about $1.93 million . . That's a total of about $7 million in just over 10 months telling the people that becoming a millionaire is just a dollar or two away . . Then there are the other millions spent by the Provincial and smaller loss. a millionaire is just a dollar or two away . . . Then there are the other millions spent by the Provincial and smaller lot-

The point that Track Talk makes is that it's probably foolish to mention that governments extracted about 580 million in direct pari-mutuel taxes last year at the country's ace tracks and didn't spend very much at all in promoting nc. . . . and also that Jack Diamond of the B.C. ub wasn't far wrong when he was the first to state lotteries are showing signs of damaging the race sublicity that lotteries are showing signs of damaging the race track business . . Then, of course, there's people like Steve Cauthen, the young jockey who recently was injured in a fall in New York . . When Cauthen made an appearance at Woodbine's opening day on May 1, he also brought an estimated 7,000 additional fans . . and if you hadn't heard, the Kentucky Derby crowd was officially 124,038 . . . the handle for the day a record $8,811,846 . . for the derby, a record $3,655,225 . . . and on Seattle Slew to win a record $1,059,207.

Otherwise, it was a great basketball series between Portland Trail Blazers and Philadelphia '76ers . . . Bill Walton was the completely dominant figure but, if you were a Portand fan, Julius Erving of the '76ers had to scare you every time he got his hands on the ball . . . what marvellous co-ordination . . After viewing the NBA playoffs, it's little wonder the U.S. fans wouldn't buy-professional hockey on the TV screen . . . this is their sport and the players excel at it TV screen . . . this is their sport and the players excel at it. . Sunday's two 'no carus' spoiled the scoreogard's appearance but committee officials were more concerned about the 'no shows.' The two gollers who failed to inform anyone of their withdrawal will be barred from district-sanctioned tournaments for the rest of the year.

"We laid down the rules (earlier this year) and we'll stick to them," said District Committee chairman Bob. Bell.

"Two twosomes were left standing on the first tee. There should be no excuse for the:"

Bell, on the other hand, was delighted with the response to identification. Golfers must show their handicap cards before starting any tournament.

There wasn't one failure. The District Committee's emphasis on conducting its ursiness in proper fashion is working . . . and it's a good thing for all concerned.

Sensational Smoking Experience

From "Gentled Tobacco" comes new Export 'A' Lights, for smokers who have gone from strong to mild and are still unsatisfied.

In all our years of cigarette making (we started in 1858), we have never made a cigarette like new Export 'A'

We took the finest, full-flavoured tobaccos available. Then gentled and blended them as never before, to produce total taste combined with a light smoke. All richness in, all harshness out. Not just another cigarette, but a truly sensational smoking experience with gentle strength.

If strong cigarettes are too much for you, and mild cigarettes not enough, you owe it to yourself to try new Export 'A' Lights.

It's the one cigarette that's just right.

The abjective of partnership bidding is, of course, to arrive at the proper final contract. This is accomplished by an interchange of information with respect to the high-card and distributional value of each of the partner's hands. Where the bidding is correct, the objective will usually be resolved.

But as the bidding progresses, the opponents are listening. in. And on occasion (or more often) the information given to the opponents provides them with the clue to winning defence. The latter was the case in today's deal,

With two seemingly equal advertising opportunities available, how would you decide which was to carry your sales messages?

We have a suggestion — take a few minutes to find out just how seemingly equal they really are.

Ask questions - how big is their circulation audience? Where do readers live? How much do they pay? And others.

Then ask for proof!

Ask to see a copy of their latest report from the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Equal opportunities? Be ABC-sure!

Ralph came home one day that his parents weren't going to live forever and he wanted to express his gratitude. (For their dedication, not for their dying.) So he dipped into our savings and sent them air fare to come visit, plus a tick-et for the dog, whom they wouldn't come without.

This was to be Mom's and Pop's first airline flight and we were praying everything would go smoothly. I don't know how to put this exactly, but I think it would be fair to say that Ralph's parents have this incredible ability to this incredible ability to create chaos. I mean, with them you have to say things you might not have to say to other people, for example, "When the airlines say they allow two pieces of baggage per person, they mean suit-cases. Do not try to substitute the oak armoire you have always wanted to send us for one of them. They will notice.

They are very sharp.' As it tutned out, Mom and Pop did fine. Due to delays, the airline offered the passengers free champagne, and not one to pass up a bargain (even though a non-drinker), Mom had five glasses and got off the plane absolutely snockered (and exalting the virtues of the airline)

Ralph and I wanted this to be a special visit, and we planned a full schedule of activities, including a whirlwind point, "I'm goin sightseeing tour, concerts, movies, a party to meet our friends and meals at several

The other reason we decided not to try to control Mom is that there is no controlling what Mom says. Ralph did try once during the visit, despite his resolve.

Suet-the hard fat around beef kidneys-is bird food to most Americans. In England, however, it's well thought of s low-cost enrichment for the stick-to-your-ribs puddings which the British enjoy in cold weather. Now that food prices are up and thermostats are turned down here in the U.S. and Canada . . . well, perhaps it's time we learned to Get fresh, membrane-free suet from your butcher and remove any stringy tissues as you cut the fat apart. Discard red areas and bloody material at the same time. Then chop the suet fairly fine and mix it with a little flour so it won't stick together in a mass. You can then store the fat in the refrigerator for months until you're ready to try a suet recipe, such as this one from "Maggie", a MOTHER reader in Naples, New York.

"This dessert suet pudding was originated by Adelaide Moore of Middlesex, England," says Maggie, "and it's

Dear Mike: My 1973 Impala seems to be getting small amounts of water into the engine oil. The oil turns beige after about 1,000 mile of driving. The service people are very nice about agreeing that I have a problem, but no one can offer a cause or cure. I've had carbon-monoxide tests run on the radiator coolant, It checks out fine. All vacuum fittings, lines, PCV, etc., are also okay. So far I've been protecting the engine (a 350-cid V-8, by the way) by changing oil and filter every 1000 miles. It's getting expensive, though. Please help. WATER IN OIL

Dear Water: Several maybe's here: 1) condensation of atmospheric moisture (unlikely but possible); 2) cracked water jacketing (possible but unlikely) 3) poor sealing at the intake-manifold-toblock juncture (most likely). If it's Number 3, it won't show up in radiator CO tests. Dear Mike: My 1977 Buick Regal has only 1200 miles on it, but there's already play in the drivetrain. When I accel-erate and then let off the gas, I can hear and feel it knock.

this is normal. Is it? The dealer has twice told me

Dear Knocked: No. A little play, yes, but not so much that you can feel and hear it. Dear Mike: I have a 1975 Chevy pickup that has some-thing wrong with the instrument gauges. The dash lights don't come on sometimes. At those times, the gas gauge always reads full, and the heat gauge reads boiling.

Have you ever wondered how the plants were named? Where they come from, who brought them to this country? There is much plant lore and history, helping us as always to appreciate our experience by gaining more knowledge. Our favorite holiday plant, the Poinsettia, was named for Joel Roberts Poinsett. He served as the first U.S. min-ister to Mexico from 1825 to 1829. His indiscreet support of local revolutionaries had pre-viously led to his recall from posts in South America, and his brash enthusiasm for Mexican politics finally resulted in his being asked to leave that country as well. On his return to his South Carolina home, he brought back cuttings of poinsettias and of the similar Mexican fireplant, which grow wild in the Mexican countryside. At first thought to be two species of a new genus, which was named in Poinsett's honor, these plants were later found to be members of the genus Euphorbia, so he is remem-bered only in the poinsettia's

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 22-year-old Victoria man who told Judge William Ostler he stole autos to 'figure out a way to commit suicide' was given jail terms totalling six months in provincial court

Gary McCulley Beck, of 1002 Carberry Gardens, pleaded guilty to auto theft, possession of a stolen car, driving while suspended, failing to remain at the scene of an accident and theft of $80 cash.

Crown coursel Robert Mulligan told the court all charges arose May 27 after a woman at 210 Dennison Road whom Beck was visiting, noticed $80 missing from her purse and notified Saanich police.

After that, there was a sto-len car, a hit-and-run in Sidney involving a traffic control device, another stolen auto and a foot chase before Beck was finally caught on Sims

Beck also admitted convictions for auto theft, criminal negligence and hit-and-run on Sept. 26, 1974, and received a jail term of six months defi-nite and nine months indeterminate. Defence lawyer William McElmoyle told the court Beck served 13 months of that sentence before being released.

When Ostler asked Beck what he planned to do with his life, he replied that he had a Grade 5 education and became depressed and drank, leading to the car thefts.

Ostler handed out three sentences of six months each, a one-month sentence for theft of the $80 and 10 days for failing to remain at the scene, all sentences to be served con-currently.

Ostler also said he would recommend Beck's time be served at a forestry camp.
